

THE GREYHOUND

Vol. XXXIV, No. 18

Loyola College — Baltimore 10, Maryland

February 24, 1961

(L. to r.) Ed Connery speaks his lines from "Passion, Poison and Petrification" as Dennis Smyth, Carol Seaholm and Martha Monius wait to speak theirs.

Dramatic Society Offers Comedy By G. B. Shaw

Tonight at 8:30 p.m., Loyola College's Dramatic Society, the Evergreen Players, will offer a presentation of "Passion, Poison and Petrification" by George Bernard Shaw. This production will be Loyola's entry in the annual Jesuit One Act Play Contest for the Maryland Province.

The contest will be held on Sunday, February 26, at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, beginning at 8:00 p.m. in the evening.

Competing in the contest will be Jesuit colleges and universities from the immediate vicinity. These include: Wheeling College from West Virginia; the University of Scranton; Georgetown from Washington, D.C., and St. Joseph's College of Philadelphia.

Tragic Comedy

Shaw's composition, which the Loyola group will present in the contest, is classified as a tragic comedy. The setting of the play in England, during the turn of the century. The plot begins with the husband attempting to murder his wife, whereupon the lover makes an appropriate entrance. As the play develops, the husband eventually poisons the lover.

In the role of the male lead is senior Dennis Smyth, who plays the part of the husband. The female lead belongs to Martha Monius of Mount St. Agnes College, who portrays the unfaithful wife.

Supporters

The top two supporting roles go to Carol Seaholm, who portrays the maid, and sophomore Ed Connery, who is cast in the role of the lover.

The remainder of the cast includes: Tom Curtis, Rich Lawrence, Dave Crocco and Paul Montgomery.

After the regional semi-finals at St. Joseph's, the winners will travel to the University of Scranton for the national finals.

Quarterly Sponsors First Art Contest

The first annual Loyola College Art Exhibit Contest sponsored by the Evergreen Quarterly was recently held on campus. The display was the result of the united effort of Barry Tillman, the Quarterly's Art Editor, and eight students.

For Art's Sake

The display was the result of the Quarterly's new policy of stirring up interest in the creative hobbies of the students.

Fred Smith

The winners were chosen by student ballot with a total of 190 students voting for 24 exhibits which were divided into the following categories: pen and ink, water color, photos, and oils.

Blind Beggar Wins

Wade Emmett

Entries in the pen and ink class were also submitted by Andrew Garreis and Wade Emmett. Barry Tillman merited honorable mention for his sketch of the Deserted House.

Fred Smith again captured first prize in the oil painting class with his picture of the Skull and Book. Other entries in this class were submitted by Joe McCurdy.

Mike Lange

Hotel and Home

With a total of six entries in the water color class Wade Emmett, a freshman, took first prize with his picture of a hotel. Other entries in this class were submitted by Gerry Perseghin, and Wade Emmett, with Fred Smith capturing honorable mention for his water color scene, Country Home.

In the photographic class, Michael Lange, a sophomore, won first prize with his black and white photo of a Melon Vendor. Entries in this class were also submitted by Mike Snyder, who obtained honorable mention for his color photo, The Bowery Drunk.

Honorable mentions went to Joe McCurdy and Tom Annulis for their entries in the sculpture and pencil sketch classes, respectively.

Barry Tillman expressed his thanks to all those who made the exhibit possible.

UMOC To Be Chosen

Voting in the Ugliest Man on Campus contest, sponsored by the senior class, will take place today in Cohn Hall and in front of the cafeteria until 3:00 P.M. All full time students are eligible to vote in the contest and may vote as many times as they choose at a rate of a nickel per vote.

An Annual Event

This year's contest is the third of the annual ballotings. Its purpose is to raise money for the senior class treasury by a convenient, inexpensive activity in which all the students can participate. Dick Hauer, the chairman of the contest, feels that the affair will raise at least $25.

The senior class will award a scroll to the winner as well as some other prize which has not yet been decided upon.

Candidates for U. M. O. C.

Nominations for the Ugliest Man on Campus were taken during the past two weeks in the bookstore. The nominations can be had for a nominal fee.

Among the seniors whose enemies (or maybe their best friends) paid to nominate them are Bo Bavis, Dick Hauer, John Conner, Ed Murn, Fred Benson, Jerry Balda, Rol Sturm, and Wade Bowman.

Bob Carey and Nick Leyko do-si-do with their partners at the mixer square dance after the A. U. game, Saturday night.

Spot News

Student Assembly

Today at 10 p.m., the Student Council will hold a first student assembly in Cohn Hall. The speakers will be Fr. Beatty, Fr. Galvin, and each of the class presidents.

Retraction

On the first page of the last issue of the Greyhound, we made an error in stating that the speaker was Mr. Hecht. It was Mr. T. Newell Cox of the Consolidated Engineering Company, who was speaking.

"Psycho"

On Wednesday, March 1 at 2:00 p.m. Dr. Leo Bartemeier will speak on "Problems Pertaining to Mental Health" in Cohn Hall.

Piano Concert

Congratulations to John Gardecki, a sophomore Physics major, for his appearance as pianist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra last Saturday afternoon.

African Safari

Any student interested in an all-expense paid opportunity to teach in Africa, should see Mr. Moritz.

Irish Colleen

We are forced to print a retraction as Don Dougherty's dog was rather offended by the Watchdog's error, and she would like to inform the students that as an Irish Setter, her name is Erin not Aaron, and that she is a she, not a he.

Editorials

Q. P. A. N' U

Various opinions are being expressed on campus concerning the recent postings, in the Dean's Bulletin Board, of the students' class standings and Quality Point Averages. Many students, in disagreeing with this action, consider it to be entirely unnecessary. Contrary to popular belief, these public notifications are very advantageous, although they do cause embarrassment for some.

Fr. Galvin has informed us of his motivations concerning this innovation. First of all, and to us the most convincing reason, the Dean pointed out that as a permanent part of his college record, the student's Q.P.A. and class rank are very important, and therefore, one should be interested in knowing if these have been accurately computed. Father did not intend to achieve this by mailing 750 letters, nor does he feel that "continual harassment of the Registrar" should be tolerated. Secondly, this practice will "encourage and challenge the better students to do even better academically and stimulate the weaker students." Father did not mention why this system was not begun in previous years.

Unfortunately, because of the time and work involved, the upperclassmen's Q.P.A.'s are not cumulative. Nevertheless, despite individual disagreements, we believe that increased effort in study can be motivated by both pride and embarrassment.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Sir:

I believe John Feller, in the February 7 issue of the Greyhound, overstepped the bounds of good taste. As I understand it, the newspaper has as its purpose to keep the student body informed on what is or is not taking place on campus and on what our students are accomplishing off campus as well. Its purpose is not to further the political ambitions of one of its writers. If John wishes to inform his fellow students as to the nature of the events at the last Student Council meeting, why does he restrict his article to just the two motions which were his ideas? Why does he not tell his fellow students about the other seven motions which were also discussed at that same meeting. Let us hope in the future that we will obtain news, rather than biased, political publicity, from Mr. Feller's column in the Greyhound.

H. Louis French '62
Junior Class Rep.

Dear Sir:

I would like to congratulate the Evergreen Quarterly on their recent Art Display Contest. It is not that I feel it was a good contest. It was a poor one. The quality of the work was passable and some pieces were even imaginative. But the quantity was surprisingly low. It is even more apparent when we consider that only eight people contributed. This could hardly be called a satisfactory participation for a college.

There are musical, dramatic, and literary activities on campus. Their struggle for recognition against student indifference is well known. Why must the visible arts be even more slighted? Can it be that college men hold some prejudice against creative expression in the forms of painting and sculpture? Could it be a disdain for what is labeled "arty" and "intellectual?" (Pardon the use of that nasty word).

Art is not old fashioned and effete. It is modern and vital. Art is not a reproduction of life, the holding up of a mirror. The artist has something to say which cannot be said with the making of sounds or the writing of words. The educated public needs to understand this; it needs to be told what to look for in art.

The initiation of an "art Education" course on campus gives us room for hope. However, I feel much more could be done to encourage both art understanding and actual artistic expression. Therefore, I praise the Evergreen Quarterly for their much needed steps in the right direction.

Senior Standouts Heagney And Murn

Loyola students who have attended any of the Hound basketball games over the past few years have come away talking over many key plays and team triumphs. Over the past few years, though the games are the same, the conversation has usually been dominated with talk on the play of the team standouts, Ed Murn and John Heagney.

Heagney High

With Saturday's American University tilt, Heagney has become the third highest scorer in Loyola's history as well as team scoring honors again this year. The affable Brooklynese B-ball player has not, however, let his ability go to his head and is yet, a friend to all team members and fellow students.

Heagney had played, before coming to Loyola, a few very high scoring seasons at Bishop Loughlin in Brooklyn. His current interests include History, his major, and his future will include some Army service, preferably in Intelligence, and later some teaching and coaching.

John & Ed look relaxed.

Murn Marvelous

Ed Murn, the taller half of the basketball story, has had his greatest success in rebounds and sideline shots this year. His height as well as his deadly wit have endeared the friendly giant to his yellow team-mates.

As for Ed's plans, he would like to be inducted into Army Transport and later possibly pursue some business career. Ed has had, before his play on the college squad, a great deal of experience on the Loyola High floor where he also excelled.

Both athletes agree that Loyola has been fun, but Murn says, tongue in cheek, "In the future, the school should turn co-ed."

Murn, Heagney have a ball.

The Watchdog

Readers of this column, both of them, have asked us not to needle Jerry Balda too much; he may faint again. By the way, Yogi, we suggest that you take this year's booster shots in Psych class. That way they won't have to put you asleep first.

Dan Galuzzo informs us that he is giving up caribou hunting for Lent this year.

Gene Nelka and Fred Benson are currently engaged in a little controversy on the price of eggs. You might think that Fred is all wet, Gene, but the yoke's on you.

Rol Sturm was warned about over-indulging in food and drink during Lent, last year. When we approached him about it, Rol swore that this wouldn't happen again this year. He's giving up food.

Confidential to Henry Becker:

If you really want to hang in there, use a rope.

We can't understand why everyone is so excited about the Dean's stamp. After all, not everything on the campus is censored, is it? LOYOLA COLLEGE—Dean of Men

Let Me At 'Em

By John Q. Feller

Date: Wednesday, February 15
Time: 2:03 p.m.

Place: Courtroom, Loyola College
Event: Trial of John Heagney and Frederick Benson

Charge: Breaking of raw eggs
The Right Honorable John Healy, presiding.

"This court will please come to order," opened Judge Healy. "How do the defendants plead?" "Guilty as charged," responded the lawyers for the defense. "Is that right?" shouted Mr. Benson. "The defendant must compose himself or be charged with contempt of court," admonished the judge. "Lefty ain't gonna to like this," whispered Mr. Heagney.

Representing Mr. Benson at the trial was that eminent bullthruwer, Mr. S. Eugene Nelka. Serving as counsel for Mr. Heagney was the prominent Student Council prosecutor, yours truly, J. Quentin Feller. Coming out of retirement to serve as the prosecutor was Mr. Dennis Homberg.

The trial began in a relatively quiet fashion in spite of a packed and restless courtroom. In turn, the witnesses for the defense were called to take the stand. First to speak was Morgan Pritchett, honorary member of the Scabbard and Blade. His testimony was subsequently thrown out when no suitable translator could be found.

The second defense witness, Charlie Carey, praised the qualities of the defendants and suggested that there was no motive or premeditation. The third witness for the defense, Pat Donnelly, after cross-examination, was charged with perjury.

Mr. Homberg at this point called on ten pledges of the Scabbard and Blade. Each of these in turn swore that the defendants with malice of forethought, had deliberately broken their eggs. The outcome of the trial soon became apparent to all.

All of a sudden, an ear-splitting shout filled the courtroom. Led by President Slawski, a group of sophomores chanted, "Elevator, elevator, Heagney got the shaft. Alas, alas, Benson gets the gas." Judge Healy ordered that the courtroom be cleared.

Carefully choosing his words, Mr. Healy addressed the defendants, "After weighing all the evidence and in light of the testimony given this bench, I find Mr. Heagney and Mr. Benson guilty as charged. In view of your past records, of which there are none, this court has decided to be merciful. Will the defendants approach the bench?"

"Messrs. Benson and Heagney, from this date until the first day of June, you both will carry at all times on your person raw eggs, equal in number to those which you broke. Case dismissed."

Harbor Lights

Forgetful of the fact that Baltimore is Baltimore, we'll drive on again into the darkness of the theater light and other lights as well. Shelley Berman has finally reached the Lyric; he's there tonight at 8:30 with cigarette, stool, and other props.

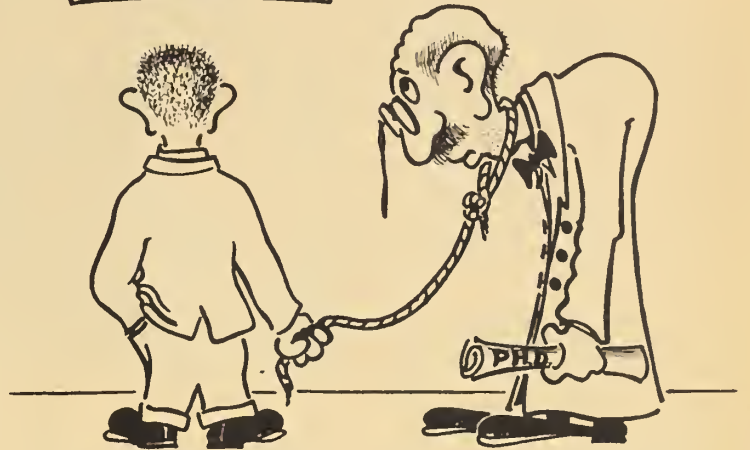

Four vocal soloists and two choral groups will join the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night at the Lyric. This concert at 8:30 is the eighth in the orchestra's popular-priced series.

The Vagabond Players are still presenting "The Time of the Cuckoo" tonight and tomorrow night. This is the third week for the performance which is in the theater of the Congress Hotel, and this is also its last week.

Monday, February 27th, brings to Ford's "A Majority of One." Gertrude Berg plays a Brooklyn widow who meets a wealthy Japanese widower onboard a ship bound for Yokohama. Sir Cedrick Hardwicke plays the Japanese widower in "A Majority of One," which begins at 8:30 p.m.

"The Music Man" is the musical hit long awaited from Broadway, and it is coming to Ford's on March 13th. The Robert Shaw Chorale will also be at the Lyric on the 13th of March.

UMOC CONTEST
FACULTY MEMBERS
MAY NOT BE ENTERED !!!

F SMITH

"Aw shucks, Doc, you would have had it made."

As far as movies go--well, there's not much else left--"The Misfits" is still around starring Marilyn Monroe and the late Clark Gable in his last film. Alec Guinness is still pulling in crowds with his "Tunes of Glory" at the 5 West. The classic musical, "Porgy and Bess" is running at the Aurora.

The neighborhood movie houses are left as a last resort, some of them showing "Ben-Hur" also as a last resort.

Campus Question

What do you think of UMOC?

Fred Berghoff '62 English

So long as the "award" is not forced on someone who would be embarrassed by acceptance, the idea might be a good one. However, the danger of insult to some sensitive soul is high and reduces the appeal of this contest somewhat.

Tom Curtis '61 Political Science

So long as there are men, there will be ugly ones. As long as there are no ugly men on campus to vote for, then why not recognize the ugliest man on campus, whoever he may be?

Wayne Thompson '63 Accounting

It's a great idea, but the faculty should be definitely be included. This way it gives the students the opportunity to express their innermost thoughts by way of a secret ballot. Why should we exclude our faculty? I'm sure they will be able to vote for us, so why not vice-versa?

Ted Herget '62 Business

It is an excellent way for the senior class to make some money and at the same time encourage a little constructive "hi-jinks." The nominees always take the contest in the spirit in which it is intended, as a huge practical joke.

Harold Kaplen '63 Biology

I think that the contest is an excellent way to increase spirit on campus. The winner will, to say the least, gain recognition for his talent, and since it is done in fun, I don't think anyone will get hurt.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

By Tom Kenney

During the next eight days, the Mason-Dixon winter sports schedule will whirl to a climax with a flurry of activity on three separate fronts. Make plans now to take in some of the action. The Hound cagers will start things off tomorrow at Hopkins in the playoffs which will decide the Northern Division representatives in the Conference tournament to be held next weekend. Good luck to Lefty Reitz's crew!

Mermen Are Tops

Bill Klarner's powerful swimming aggregation figures to rule the roost in the Conference tournament, next weekend at Gallaudet. The Hound mermen, undefeated in M.D. competition, have the manpower and desire to carry them past A.U.'s Eagles who loom as the only serious threat to a Loyola triumph.

Dark Horses

After a rough start, Dick Clem's hearty Hound matmen have come on with such a determined rush that they are now rated as dark-horse contenders to cop the M.D. wrestling crown which will be decided at Homewood next weekend. This year's tournament promises not only a high team finish but also a large number of individual placings for this fine Hound squad.

Congratulations

Sincerest congratulations go out from the Greyhound to John Heagney. Last Saturday night, the amiable Hound captain registered the 1,145th point of his college basketball career to become the third highest scorer in Loyola cage history.

Wrestlers Rampaging

Word is out around Mason Dixon wrestling circles to watch out for the hungry Hounds from Loyola. Dick Clem's grapplers, who have taken their last four matches in a row by lopsided scores, are favored to cop their fifth consecutive win tonight at 8 p.m. in the Towson State gym. The Towson match will be the last regular season appearance for the Hounds before the conference tournament which will be held next weekend at Hopkins. And speaking of the tournament, the Greyhound outlook is very bright. The experts give them an outside chance to take the title and some of the Hound performers will certainly be seeded high in the tournament lineup. Since the tournament is being staged locally, it is hoped that a good number of Loyola fans will be able to witness what should be the best wrestling competition in Mason Dixon history.

Hounds To Meet B. U. In Conference Playoffs

By Pete Cook

Tomorrow, the Hound basketballers pack their bags and move down Charles Street towards town and stop off at the Johns Hopkins University campus to engage in the Mason-Dixon Conference's Northern Division Playoff. Three separate games are carded for the Homewood gym with tapoffs at 6, 8, and 10 p.m. The starting time for the Hound game with B.U. is not known at this writing.

The Setup

This is the second year the conference has employed the playoff system. Under the ruling, 4 teams from each division make the Conference tournament scheduled for March 3rd, 4th, and 5th at Catholic University. The league is composed of 15 teams--8 in the Southern Division and 7 teams in the Northern. All 8 teams in the Southern Division square off in the playoffs, with the winners of the 4 games going to Washington. In the Northern, however, the number 1 finisher in regular season play automatically qualifies for the tournament and the last 6 plays each other in this arrangement: No. 2 vs. No. 7, No. 3 vs. No. 6, and No. 4 vs. No. 5.

Last Wednesday the Reitzmen ran their victory string over Hopkins to 15 in a row by trouncing the Blue Jays 90-46. John Heagney led the Loyola onslaught in that one with 20 points. Other double figure producers were Jody Satterfield, Ed Murn, and Charlie O'Donnell with 17, 14, and 11 respectively.

A. U. Blues

Last weekend the Hounds played host to American U. in their last home game. The Eagles were reluctant to give the Hounds a going away present however, and prevailed 78-61. The Greyhounds gave it all they had and held the advantage until 10 minutes were gone in the second half.

Freshman Jody Satterfield swished 19 points to lead the Green's production, while Murn (16) and Heagney (14) were the other double-figure cagers.

Matmen vie for win.

Swimmers' Final Set

By Jim DeBoy

Tomorrow night the Hounds take on the Catholic U. mermen in their final meet of the regular season. The meet will be at 7:30 at C.U. Last year the Hounds defeated C.U. by a score of 54-40 and are out to duplicate that victory. A win tomorrow will enable the Hounds to finish their season without a defeat in conference competition, and an 8 and 1 overall record.

Lone Loss

The Hound's only loss came against powerful LaSalle. A perennial power in the East, LaSalle held a 46-42 lead going into the last event, the 400 yd. freestyle. A victory in this event would have given the Hounds the win, but LaSalle set a new pool record while taking the event and the meet, 53-42.

Norfolk Invaded

Last Friday night, Loyola downed William and Mary of Norfolk by a score of 56-38. The Hounds took firsts in eight of the eleven events. Paul Karpers, Lew Smith, and Pete Powley each took a first besides swimming in the victorious 400 yd. medley relay team.

Yellow Jackets Stung

On Saturday afternoon, the Hounds routed Randolph-Macon 60-35. The Hounds were trailing 27-25 going into the seventh event, the 100 yd. freestyle. Pete Powley won the freestyle, and the Hounds swept first and second places in each of remaining events to pull away from the Yellow Jackets. Al Kubeluis and Marty Pilsh both set pool records in the 220 and 440 yd. freestyles respectively. The freestyle relay team of Hughes, Preis, Young, and Burns turned in an extraordinary effort to break the old record by 5 full seconds, swimming the 400 yds. in 3:57:4.

Intramurals

By Dick Cooke

Four teams will vie today at 10 a.m. as the number of undefeated teams in intramural basketball dwindles. Lamar's Pagans meet the Polar Bears while the Aborigines take on the ever tough Moleskins. The Freshmen Polar Bears will have a slight height advantage for today's fray but the Pagans make up for this disadvantage with the sharp-shooting of Jim Lamar and Steve Bogusky.

Semi-finals

Today's winners will go on to the semi-finals in the weeks to come. Other finalists in the winners bracket will be determined on March 1st when the Barbarians meet the Handy-Six and the Dukes tangle with the Jocks. Can you pick the winner? It is still a tossup from this vantage point. Be prepared for heavy action in the next few weeks.
